MountainView Hospital's Graduate Medical Education Program Announces 2017 Class of Medical Residents

MountainView Hospital's Graduate Medical Education program this month announced its 2017 class of Medical Residents, for Internal Medicine, Surgery and its first class of OB-GYN residents.

The announcement was made during the annual event called Match Day – when graduating medical students learn where they will be spending the next several years as residents. This will be the second class of Internal Medicine and Surgery Graduate Medical Education residency program residents and the first class of OB-GYN residents.

The talented group of 32 residents will join the 52 residents in Internal Medicine and Surgery who joined MountainView Hospital's Graduate Medical Education residency program in 2016

Coming off its inaugural year, MountainView Hospital's Graduate Medical Education program averaged 100 applicants for each residency position. All PGY-1 (post-graduate year 1) positions were filled: 20 for Internal Medicine, four for OB-GYN and eight Surgery residency positions.

The 2017 Main Residency Match® was the most competitive in the organization's history[i], as reported by the National Resident Matching Program®, which matches fourth-year medical students with hospital and universities find the right “match” for their residency goals.

“The program directors and coordinators, faculty and facility leadership did an amazing job in creating an optimal experience for potential residents, resulting in our successful match results,” said Dr. Darren Swenson, Vice President Graduate Medical Education and Designated Institutional Official, HCA Far West Division. “Our inaugural resident class help the high standard for the future of our program, and as we grow each year we continue our tireless commitment to excellence for our hospitals and communities.”

MountainView Hospital launched its Graduate Medical Education program in 2015 with the accreditation of its Internal Medicine Residency Program from the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education
